WASHINGTON.

Stanley Mathews is Confirmed by the Senate.

Attack on Garfield in the New York Herald.

DAWES UNHAPPY

New York, May 12.—A Washington special to the evening papers says: Senator Dawes is very unhappy over the disgraceful treatment by his senatorial colleagues of the White House. The senator has heard that Garfield was displeased with him and desired that some other senator should take charge of the previous nominations business. Dawes has labored continually for harmony and the more he labored the less harmony there was.

DISCUSSING STANLEY MATHEWS

The senate immediately after going into executive session resumed the consideration of the nomination of Stanley Matthews. Short work taking the floor with a speech against confirmation. It is expected that final action will be taken before adjournment.

PERMANENT COMMISSION

A deputation of the New York Temperance society called on the president today and asked the president to modify the order of ex-President Hayes forbidding the sale of liquors at army posts and posts so as to have it include fermented as well as distilled liquors. The deputation presented a petition from forty states and territories representing some three hundred thousand members of churches and temperance societies among the petitioners were Governor Long of Massachusetts and Governor St. John of Kansas.

ROBERTSON WILL TELL

Philadelphia, May 12.—The Ledger's New York special says: Judge Robertson I hear does not intend to let the Conkling onslaught on him in connection with the Cincinnati convention go without a suitable reply and the reply will not be long coming either if the assurances of the judge's friends are worth anything. Robertson is understood in response to an interrogatory telegram today point blank to deny Conkling's assertion that at Chicago he personal hostilities to him went so far as to lead him to declare that he would not support Arthur if nominated for vice president. There is an intent down and on the hand that the Conkling speech cannot be published but for my part it seems this is not likely to be complied with.

THE HERALD'S CRITICISM

New York, May 12.—The Herald has known very bitter against Garfield and the administration generally. It gives this morning nearly a full page of so called inside history of the late presidential campaign in which unscrupulous pretending, dodging and backsliding and shameful bargains are disclosed. In a caustic editorial the Herald declares the administration to be one of petulance and revenge. A subject for debate and speculation among its friends. An administration about which republicans speak with shrugging shoulders and ascending eyebrows, an administration composed of brilliant and audacious politicians. A man knowing less about foreign affairs than any one in public life is made secretary of state for foreign affairs, one industrious active, middle-aged clerks in charge of five departments, one old sentleman about six weeks behind in correspondence of the interior department and an invalid boy is president of the United States.

ANSWERING THE HERALD LETTER

Chicago, May 12.—A New York special says that in an interview with one who knows of what he speaks this morning the Herald says the two column article accompanied by over a column of editorial comments which appears in the N. Y. Herald this morning being in what it undertakes with a number of matters alluded to I wish to make a few comments and corrections. First the whole article bears internal evidence of the solicitous assistance in preparation. Who but Senator Conkling or the president could have told the writer what is said between these two men in private conversation at Mentor. Now it is to be and to suppose that Garfield told the reporter or the Herald such things, so the logical conclusion is that Conkling furnished the material and inspiration. Second, the article flouts the president as a tool of Mr. Blaine. Mr. Blaine is not in a position to take part in the present fight. If he were it would not be so persistently forced on to him. He dubbed Conkling once eighteen years ago and that worst man never found an acceptable opportunity to return the contest till now when Blaine cannot help. Third, the article directly charges or implies with Blaine purchase of votes among the campaign and even of votes to New York in his interest in order to make up losses in New England to know something on the inside subject and I know that the trip to New York. During a large part of the campaign that charge of Garfield's comes—I believe Mr. General directions were to and no promise to anyone. I General Garfield's entire life was inconsistent with the insinuations promises or pledges were made beyond the general statement that he would treat all public men fairly. As to the trip to New York I wish to say one word. Day Hubbell correspondent Sun. After nominating the doubtful [illegible] of the republican party at the time General Garfield in a sort of desperation suggested a conference in the city of New York of the leading men of the party from all sections of the country. Now the facts are the only ones there were serious doubts about was Conkling and it was his friends and not Garfield's, who suggested the New York conference, and who pressed Garfield to go to it and attend it. First they urged him to attend the meeting of the national committee on July which he declined to do, the desire of Conkling's friends being to have Blaine and Conkling. After the national committee was organized Conkling's friends still didn't know whether he was going to take part in the campaign and heartily support the ticket or not so they suggested the New York conference and insisted on Garfield's attendance. While many others were opposed to the conference and it was held I went to New York at Garfield's request to see what the situation was that demanded his presence, before he would decide whether to attend or not, letters and telegrams that reached him on both sides of the east being generally vague and unsatisfactory. I was told by Senator Dorsey secretary of the national committee that they didn't know what Conkling was going to do in the campaign and that they wanted a meeting between him and Garfield which they hoped would be satisfactory to Conkling and it first would settle the question as to his support. Garfield didn't seek to discover the fact that he thought Conkling wanted some sort of conditions or assurances before he would actively support the ticket. He desired me to urge Garfield to come and said he did not think that Conkling would demand pledges but thought he wanted to talk with Garfield on general policy and wanted to have him which he could look him in the eyes. I asked Dorsey to send for Anson G. McCook and state the same facts to him saying if he would unite with me I would urge Garfield to attend the conference. General McCook was sent for and he came, and Senator Dorsey again stated the case. McCook told him it meant Conkling was contemplating treachery, to either impose conditions before he supported the ticket or skulk and do nothing. It was simply treachery, Dorsey said. You may call it whatever you please. I have stated the facts. The matter was discussed at considerable length, and the final result was that I agreed to return to Mentor the next day and report in favor of holding the conference and of Garfield's attending not to make pledges or conditions with Conkling but to draw out his views. That was the purpose for which Garfield attended the August conference. How well he succeeded is known to the country. Now the temptation is strong to indulge in comment. The subject is suggestive, but I will indulge in only one. Suppose all said about General Garfield's promises and pledges be true it only proves that Conkling and his followers were not willing to support a republican ticket as loyal honest republicans should, but only on conditions only for honors and profits, the loaves and fishes. This is the self-confessed disgraceful story hatched out and told now, after eight months of incubation in such boastful tones as only one in the United States is master of.

MRS. GARFIELD'S CONDITION.

Mrs. Garfield is a little better this afternoon but her condition is undoubtedly critical. During the past four days the temperature of her blood has not fallen below 104 degrees. The president attends her constantly and is himself much exhausted. The heat continues to increase and the thermometer was 94 in the shade at 11 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Garfield is too ill to be moved.

KELLOGG'S RESOLUTION

Senator Kellogg called up his resolution calling upon the heads of the various executive departments for information relative to clerks and employes in their respective departments, including information as to persons and persons on whose recommendations such clerks or employes were appointed. Sherman opposed the resolution. Under the existing law there was a register made up of all officers and employes of the government, which was itself a very expensive document. It contained all the information called for by the present resolution, with the exception of information relative to the person or persons and conditions the appointments were made.

CHANDLER'S CHANCES

The judiciary committee have decided on a report probably adverse on the Chandler case but refuse to give it out. Prominent republicans say the senate will adjourn immediately after the Chandler and Matthews cases are disposed of.

MATTHEWS CONFIRMED

Stanley Matthews is confirmed by one majority.

Reviving the Jewish Persecution

England Aroused on the Fenian Question

PERSECUTING THE JEWS

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Today's papers are full of accounts of anti Jewish riots in the south and southwest. There were two days rioting in Berdyczev and the government of Cherson. Shops were pillaged and three Jewish houses burned. There was a serious conflict between the troops and the village authorities at Nikolaiev in the government of Odessa arising from the authorities trying to recover stolen property. Troops were dispatched there from Odessa. Troop are stationed in the streets. One person was killed and eighteen wounded. There have been 140 arrests. The municipal council is deliberating with closed doors on measures to prevent further disturbance. The disturbances were stopped in Berdyczev and Nikolaiev. On the day the Jews houses and shops were destroyed. There no similar accounts from any other place. Two special trains of refugee Jews have arrived at Berdyczev. A number of infantry were sent to Elisopol. Martial law to suppress and if Nikolaiev where all the houses of Jews were destroyed. Two companies have been formed of Elizabeth female emigrant Jews for the assistance of industrious sufferers from the violence of the mob and the other purpose of Christians to relieve the families of four hundred persons arrested. Bulletins of proclamations have been issued in name the Christian inhabitants against the Jews. The Vienna merchants of London received a telegram from Kiev this day stating that the whole Jewish quarter known as Pylski had been burned. Twenty thirty million roubles. Crowds of refugee Jews are crossing the Austrian frontier at Podiaib.

The Czar's Progress

St. Petersburg, May 12.—The Czar Czarina and Czarevitch arrived here from Tsarskoe Selo yesterday morning, and drove to the Winter palace. The streets were thronged with people. The imperial party appeared on the balcony and were received with enthusiasm. The Czar and Czarevitch then drove through the great Sadowaia street to the Champ de Mars, the empress and the rest of the imperial household following in mourning carriages. Thousands of cossacks and cuirassiers were dispersed with but a brilliant cortege of mounted officers closely preceded and followed the carriage. Immense crowds of people lined Newsky Prospect and other streets leading to the place where the review of troops took place. The Czar took a horse near the place and the empress took the open carriage.

The imperial troops followed by a large suite and the usual foreign military representatives. The troops who number 40,000 received the Czar with enthusiasm. The public were not admitted to the review grounds except by ticket and to raised platforms erected for the occasion. After the review the imperials lunched with Prince Oldenburg. They then visited the citadel of the fortress and the adjacent chapel in the Catharina canal. Crowds of people assembled along the route they travelled and welcomed the royal party cordially.

Mexico's Resources

New York, May 12.—A writer in the Commercial Bulletin, replying to an editorial on Mexican subsidies in the New Orleans Picayune, which was noticed in these dispatches on the 4th inst., claims that the railroad grants made by Mexico are surely as valuable as the lands granted the Pacific railways by our government, and from similar enhancement of their value by the railroads. Mexico expects to be able to pay the subsidies. The one of four per cent upon the custom duties given by the Mexican government to secure some of these subsidies will not of course pay them today, but it will pay them when the railroads are built and the exports and imports of the country are increased. The writer contends that the popular impression as to Mexico's impoverished condition, is a mistake. She is really a fresh young undeveloped land with resources as practically inexhaustible for our time as those of our own country. Her population is a little over twelve persons to the square mile while the United States has nearly fifteen. Her national debt is $42 [illegible] per head, that of the United States $[illegible]. Her combined exports and imports for the last attainable year [illegible] $60,700,000, just about equal to those of Norway. The annual revenue, sufficiently collected was by the latest returns $17,811,125. It is usually about $21,000,000.

Gas Convention

St. Louis, May 12.—The Western Gas association listened this morning to two long, able and elaborate papers upon the economical use of gas, which were almost entirely technical in character, after which several new members were admitted and a number of directors elected. Mr. Butterworth of Rockford, Illinois was elected president and E. H. Hall secretary and treasurer. The next convention of the association will be held in Chicago.

TOOK THE WRONG TIPPLE

Denver, May 12.—George McLean a workman in the employ of Hallack & Howard this afternoon drank some spirit to acid and will die. It is not known whether it was an accident or suicide as he has been drinking considerably lately and it is the thought he might have taken the acid by mistake.

Denver's Deaths

Denver, May 12.—The report of the board of health shows the number of deaths in this city during April to have been fifty one. Of these ten were from meningitis, eight consumption, six pneumonia and four caused by accident.

Shot in the Back

GEN. UPTON'S WILL

A Great Deal Left by Us Relative in New York, May 12.—The Times special from Buffalo N. Y. says: The will of Gen. Upton was submitted to probate in the surrogate's office this afternoon. The will was drawn in Paris, July 1st, 1881, while he was visiting his parents in the town previous to starting on a tour around the world. It is a simple document. Miss Sarah Upton, the general's sister, to whom he was strongly attached is executrix and is empowered to act through her father and brother who reside here and their members of the family which consisted of ten grown children are all remembered. The value of the estate is estimated at $[illegible] the greater portion of which is invested in mortgages on farms in Erie County and at Birch Creek, Michigan. The income from copyrights of Upton's infantry tactics and tactics for Military Boards is large and it has since Sarah's death been supposed that the income from the copyrights would be sufficient to support the family. The income from the copyrights [illegible] the family. The question of such has been a problem and it is doubtful if the executors will be able to pay the income provided for the dependents. They are now [illegible] and shall [illegible] before Surrogate Calvin and Chief Justice Daniel Hall Fine Commissioners. It is stipulated that no more than $[illegible] shall be [illegible] Upton's debts. The [illegible] that on the death of the testator [illegible] the property revolving in some time within [illegible] after it is [illegible] the executors may decide. The income from the copyrights amount to $[illegible] per annum. The [illegible] were bequeathed to Lieutenant Colonel Charles Gray, Major Charles Gray, Captain Emory Upton, Lieutenant Upton, Miss Emma Williams, Gen. Hall and others. The general's [illegible] are bequeathed to his father and mother to be by them distributed as they think proper.

BONANZA SUITS

Discontinued in Judge Wright's Court

San Francisco, May 12.—The [illegible] Bonanza suits were dismissed this morning. The plaintiffs in the suits were not present. The dismissal of the suits was [illegible] with the understanding that no costs should be taken against the plaintiffs. The attorneys for the defendants only appeared in the court room and filed a minute in the clerk of the court. It will be made the entire subject of a special [illegible] and [illegible] as outlined by law. It is understood that this has been done against the wishes of the other stockholders and plaintiffs. One of the stockholders, Peter Christ, has brought a motion in the district court of Judge Sullivan to have such an order that the plaintiffs in the suits shall show cause why the dismissal shall not be annulled and they be allowed to intervene. Associates the attorneys for Christ's action they assert by his claims that [illegible] Mr. Hallidayon of Turley's attorneys stated that Senator P. Dwyer who stood behind Burke was discouraged because he found that whatever money was gained by the mining suit recently decided would have to pass through Flood's hands and had given the method up. Dwyer declined to be interviewed.

The examiner considers the proceedings conclusive proof that a bargain between the parties was made without reference to the interests and rights of the stockholders and doubtless Burke got handsomely paid for his compromise.

Walking Match—

Chicago, May 12.—At 12 [illegible] the score of the walking match was as follows: Harriman 333, Troy 248, Krohne 240, Fahey 223, Strucker, 215, Brucke 210, Webster 204, Campana, 202. Harriman's score is the most noteworthy. He is confident of equaling the best time on record and will certainly beat 550 miles unless he breaks down.

Madison Square Stood: Harriman 427, Fahey 411, Krohne 405, Fahey 401, Strucker, 383, Brucke 3, Campana.

Harriman's score continued to be better than the best on record.

Great Immigration

New York, May 12.—The Tribune says the rate of immigration has increased at this port this week 18 per cent over last. It is estimated that 70,000 will arrive this month. The greater part of the immigrants are Germans. Of the 10,992 immigrants who arrived in the first [illegible] months of this year [illegible] were men and [illegible] were women. The Britishers who have two destinations only one is Baxter street the other Chicago. Those going to Chicago are in manufacture of wine and grape growing. A number have come to Ohio for the same purpose.

Mexican Matters

New York, May 12.—The World's City of Mexico special says: The government officially states that it and as has recently with distrust. The relations between President Gonzales and Romero are very cordial. The same correspondent says: At the Grand Masonic convention Pacheco of California declared Gonzales upon entering on his duties because the preceding speeches had all on the subject that crowned his [illegible]. The convention adjourned in a [illegible] with the [illegible] Mexican had given him both and [illegible] part of the great northern confederation. Had [illegible] long in mind. He loved both with equal fervor and hoped that time would strengthen the amicable relations now existing between them.

LEADVILLE.

A Terrific Explosion.

The Casualties of Mining Illustrated at the L. M. Mine.

[Special to the Gazette.]

Leadville, May 12, 1881.—A little after two o'clock this evening a terrible explosion of giant powder occurred at the L. M. mine situated in California gulch two miles above the city and a little below the Stonewall mine. So great was the shock of the explosion that a number of men who were standing about the buildings of the Iron mine nearly a quarter of a mile away were thrown violently to the ground and buildings through the city were very perceptibly jarred.

The L. M. has been working only day shifts. The floor of the mine embraced a shaft house covering a small engine and hoister and other machinery necessary for ordinary hoisting. A little outside the shaft house stood a powder house constructed of sheet iron. Either through an explosion or carelessness the shaft house caught fire and was soon in flames, the workmen at the Iron mine. A number of these women and were the burning building and observing the powder house [illegible] in danger of becoming overheated started to remove it to a place of safety. A word of warning [illegible] them to set it down and run for their lives. They had scarcely taken [illegible] steps when the explosion occurred. Further three were injured two of them very severely. One was washed up in a terrible manner his head was barely escaping severance and the flesh his clothes torn from his body and in one blown out, while the other two were severely hurt that they will not be able to walk for several days. Their escape from instant death seems remarkable for every thing in the neighborhood was blown to atoms. The magazine contained three hundred pounds of giant powder. The earth beneath it was excavated by the explosion to a depth of twelve and a half feet for Mr. Williams the [illegible] injuries have very low [illegible] hope of their recovery.

The casualties in mines have been very numerous during the past year and would have been fearful but for the many acts of heroism on the part of the common miner. Miners receive but little credit for their acts of courage and self sacrifice so often performed for their brothers. In fact such acts are frequently fail to come to light at all for miners are not boastful of such things. I shall allude to this subject again.

SPRING STARS

Monument Alleged to be One of the Points on the Star Route.

The star route investigation has been stirring up a good deal of excitement throughout the country generally and the frauds discovered in Oregon have aroused much indignation, but when it is alleged that El Paso county boasts of a Star of the first magnitude, then the matter begins to come pretty near home. Monument is a town quite familiar to the people of Colorado Springs as an enterprising little town to the north of us and Gwillimville has a wide reputation for its cheese. Table Rock is surrounded by good ranches and Bijou Basin has a good sheep country around it but it is not likely that many people have suspected that the star route rogues had marked these hamlets for their own. Nevertheless a correspondent of the Denver Tribune who writes from Monument, gives some facts that make the thing look probable. We condense the letter which appeared in the Tribune of yesterday as follows: "The mail route No. [illegible] from Monument east via Gwillimville, Table Rock, Comers Mills, Bijou Basin and O. Z. to River Bend, a station on the Kansas Pacific distant from the first point some seventy miles.

"When the star route was changed from a semi weekly to a daily the good folks along it were so much astonished as if a thunderbolt had fallen from a clear sky. They would as soon thought of trying to tunnel Pike's Peak with a pocket as secured such favors by petition. But there it was an established fact although unasked and unexpected, and although some of the postmasters growled grumbled and threatened to resign an office which paid them next to nothing and which was to double their duty, the dozen or fifteen families which populate the 45 miles of country through which the route passed between Bijou Basin and River Bend could not be satisfied that the government was able and willing to pay thousands of dollars annually to give them a daily mail which would deliver the Weekly Tribune and garden seeds.

This route was established in October 1878, as a weekly mail, and was carried for $800 per year. During the winter 76 a petition signed by the postmasters along the route and many of the citizens for a semi weekly mail was denied upon the ground, doubtless that the business would not warrant it. Upon the expiration of the contract, however, on July 1st 1878 it was advertised as a semi weekly and the contract for carrying it was bid by L. H. Watts of Santa Fe. He sublet it to a man named Williams, who carried it until the next spring when Watts failing to pay him he naturally enough refused to transport it longer. Watts contracted to pay him more for carrying it than he received from the government, and as it appeared afterward that he was financially embarrassed, he did not or could not carry out his agreement with either Williams or the government. We never heard up here that his bondsmen suffered however. After the failure of Watts to fulfill his contract, it seems, from the best information we can get, to have been let to A. H. Brown, of Washington. Here is where we seem to discover the milk in the cocoanut. There were men here who were destitute of bidding upon the route, but if it was advertised for bids either then or later, when it became a daily line, they were unable to see it or find it out. Some two months before, after Brown secured it, it was changed to a daily line, and sublet by him to a man named Stokes, and afterwards to Mr. Davis who is now carrying it at a compensation of about $5,000 per year. The amount of business on the line can be understood by the few figures which we give. The total weight of mail going east May 8th was [illegible] pounds. The postals and letters footed up 34. The balance of mail consisted of circulars, papers and packages. May 9. Total weight of mail, [illegible] pounds, number of letters and postals, 40, the balance, circulars, papers and packages. In this mail were 4 pounds of seeds. May 10.—Weight of mail, 41 pounds, letters and postal, 29, in this mail there were 6 pounds of seeds. The amount coming in from the east is far less. To do this business it requires three men and twelve horses. Along this route there is not a solitary town. Gwillimville, postoffice is a ranch, Table Rock is a ranch, and Comers Mill is a ranch. Bijou Basin is a fertile valley beyond the Known. There are two stores there but beyond that only a few ranchmen and stockmen. Beyond this point to the terminus of the route, a distance of 45 miles there is but one office the O. Z. The country there is only scantily watered and is but little better than a barren waste. We asked a gentleman who had been over the route every week for several years, how many families there were along the 45 miles of daily mail route, and after scratching his recollection for a few moments he called them off and our correspondent tallied them on his fingers—He named less than fifteen. The route extends for miles along the Big Sandy where nothing disturbs the rattlesnake, coyote and the gentle jack rabbit except the occasional visits of the pious cow puncher and the semi daily appearance of the representative of the United States mail service galloping swiftly along, his saddle-bags freighted with weekly newspapers, new varieties of squash seeds and early peas together with it may be copies of valuable agricultural reports, and those fascinating and hair raising tales found in the volumes which emanate annually from the patent office. There is no stopping to read postal cards on this route. 140 miles has to be passed over daily, and that between the rising of the sun and the going down of the same.

What as a Science.

Boston Post.

The great increase of the literature of whist in the past few years is evidence that it is taking a higher place among intellectual pastimes than it ever occupied before. It is developing into a science which, nevertheless, includes a social element, by which it is made both agreeable and instructive. There would be as much sense in calling a problem of Euclid immoral as in bringing that charge against whist. Whist stimulates no unworthy ambitions and brings into action no qualities of the mind that ought to be repressed. It presents the conditions of an intellectual contest; and instead of its being a game of chance, the purpose of good players is to fight against chance as well as against play. A weak-minded person can never be a good whist player; and if we follow the history of the game and examine the characters and records of those who have been brilliant players, we shall almost invariably find that they have been distinguished in other respects. A physician of eminence once said that he could tell the character of a person after seeing him in a game of whist. Perhaps that test would have failed him occasionally, but there are many things that can be pretty accurately inferred by close observation of a person's methods in the quadrilateral contest. Does he decide quickly and accurately, or does he suffer from over caution? Does he pursue a carefully acquired system under all circumstances? or, like a successful general, does he measure each new situation and execute brilliant coups outside the regularly prescribed tactics? Is he a philosopher in defeat and a gentleman under all circumstances? Are his thoughts always at his command like well drilled soldiers, or do they straggle? These are a number of the points of character that can be gauged by an experienced observer. The whist player who follows the game with a purpose to master all its intricacies and learn what it has to teach does not waste his time. He is in a good training school for the development of mental qualities and the correction of character. Considerations like these have given the game of whist marvellous vitality and universality. It occupies a commanding place among human necessities. It is an agent of national enlightenment and social growth and its benefits are being recognized now as they never were before. To be a good whist player in these days is to possess at least one leading accomplishment.

A Long Delayed Funeral.

Cincinnati Commercial, May 3.

During the battle at Droop Mountain, West Virginia, November 6, 1863, First Sergeant Jacob Fritz, of the Twenty-eighth Ohio was shot through the head and instantly killed. His brother Lew. Fritz, helped to bury the body on the field, and left several distinguishing marks by which the grave could be recognized. When in 1867 the government removed the dead from Droop Mountain to Grafton, by some oversight the body of Sergeant Fritz was overlooked, and after a continued correspondence with the authorities at Washington and at Grafton, without gaining any definite information, Mr. Lew. Fritz came to the conclusion that his brother's body still rested where he had buried it, and he accordingly left for West Virginia and the old battlefield last week for the purpose of making a thorough search.

Time had so changed the face of nature that but few if any of the old landmarks were recognizable, and the search would have been fruitless, but that a farmer named McCarty remembered that in ploughing he had turned up a couple of stones that he thought might be the head and foot stones of a grave. Upon digging down at the spot a body was discovered, which was identified by the hole in the skull and a few boards placed over it by the living brother, as that of the gallant Sergeant, who had died in defense of his cause, and had lain so long in an unknown and unhonored grave.

After carefully disinterring the remains and preparing them for shipment to this city, Lew. Fritz returned yesterday to arrange for a fitting funeral, which will take place next Sunday afternoon.

ADVERTISED BRIEFS.

Lord's News.

Every one will be glad to hear of the new compilation of Advertised with the addition of the advertisements of Walter Scott's works, and the entire collection of Advertised Briefs. [illegible] Advertised briefs, the advertisements of the entire contents of Walter Scott's works, there is always something interesting in the lively and depressing about the place. It speaks to such dreams and such disappointments. Unmitigated of the sepulcher, [illegible] says the Roman poet. "Why does the shade the hall of the wicked days?" is Dryden's way of putting it. [illegible] a cozy house to found a great family, was the ambition to which Scott's heart all thought for the fame of his work. [illegible] and his family was [illegible] the disappointment of the rest of the Protestant [illegible] Walter Scott was a Roman [illegible] The [illegible] Scott's chief [illegible] and with his charm, can [illegible] without. Now the house [illegible] away into the occupation of strangers, and the family of Sir Walter Scott is by no means certainly extinct. Yet Abbotsford must always be a place to which all to Newstead, poetical visitors, as well as the merely curious, will turn. Immortality [illegible] Abbotsford is [illegible] about Abbotsford and Newstead than [illegible] from any other part of the world, more from England, Ireland, or Scotland beyond. We are glad to hear that the new occupant of Sir Walter Scott's house is not going to close his gates against those who would fain stand in the rooms where the Bonnie Minstrel worked and played.

[illegible] specially for newspapers. This shows we are a nation of newspaper readers. It represents an expenditure of two cents a day from every inhabitant.

Judge McMorris' confirmation is an indication that Senator Hill is stronger in the senate than [illegible] The fight over McMorris was a measure of their strength.

Dave Day has returned to his paper. He learned a good many political secrets while at the capital, which will make his paper interesting. He says the Muldoon will be worth as a copy for a few weeks.

Gladstone's eulogy of Disraeli in moving a grant for the Beaconsfield monument was so eloquent that the leader of the opposition, Sir Stafford Northcote, said the speech was a better monument than marble.

The Bulgarian government in by no means harmonious. The prince is disposed to resign unless there is some change. The people are not used to governing themselves. This is the source of the difficulty.

The bitter fight against Stanley Matthews is ended. It began in the latter part of Hayes' administration and was waged so bitterly that his confirmation was considered impossible. The senate committee on judiciary simply pigeonholed the nomination. President Garfield promptly sent Matthews' name in again. When it was reported to the senate by the committee only one member, Lamar, recommended the confirmation. Mr. Matthews is respected as an able lawyer and honest man.

Both the editor of the Tribune and the editor of the Colorado Springs GAZETTE have denied in terms that the article in the latter paper on the third of May was inspired by a consultation of the parties interested on the other side. It is proper to give them credit therefor. There is no use denying the fact, however, that the article was based upon a wrong impression, and was calculated to deceive those who do not know the facts.—Leadville Herald.

This is a very lame apology for "the persistent lying" article. If it is true there was no conference, why not say that the whole article was founded on a misapprehension and was therefore wrong. No other apology is manly or respectable.

A new statement has recently been made of the way the Robertson nomination was brought about. Two nights before it was made Senator Platt and Conkling called on the president. Garfield then suggested Robertson for district attorney but Conkling opposed it. Mr. Garfield then asked Mr. Conkling who he wanted. The rest is given as follows:

"Conkling then produced his slate with which you are already familiar, and the president looked it over, and said: 'Very well, senators, I shall nominate these gentlemen, but I see you have named no one for collector. How about that?'

"Conkling, probably flushed with success, and feeling contempt toward the president who so readily adopted his slate without asking any questions, replied in the most aggravating and insolent manner: 'You needn't mind about that to-night. We haven't yet determined upon who shall be nominated for that position' and rising from their seats, the senators from the United States of New York walked out without even saying 'thank you,' or anything else to the president for favors already conceded."

Judge McMorris' Appointment.

From the Leadville Democrat.

Judge McMorris has been nominated land commissioner at last. The Colorado Springs GAZETTE, after indulging one triumphant crow over all competitors, can now smooth its ruffled plumage, and settle down to the ordinary business of life.

HYDRANTS NEEDED.

Some Lessons Suggested by Denver's Great Fire

Our telegraph columns yesterday contained an account of the burning of Zang's brewery in Denver by which property to the amount of $1 000 was destroyed which might have been saved if the fire hydrants near the building One hydrant which was within about 50 feet of the brewery was disabled by the blowing off of the cap and the next nearest one was 300 feet distant The water was pumped to this but there was not head enough to force the water through hose half a mile of hose and throw it upon the flames The consequence of this is thus described by the Tribune

Notwithstanding considerable time had been consumed the fire had made but little progress when the Bates and Hall steam fire engines reached the scene and might have been extinguished had it been within the power of the firemen to do anything at all There was but one fire plug within easy reach and this was rendered unserviceable by the bursting of the cap at the first instant the firemen turned on the water There was but one more plug but this was along way off and it was necessary to splice out a line of hose to reach it Before this could be accomplished the flames had burst from the room and by a strong wind blowing from the south were swept like a flash throughout the large brick building

The result was that the Windsor building was destroyed and $10 000 worth of property melted to nothing in the flames Our attention was called to this matter yesterday by Chief Pixley of our own fire department who recently applied to the city council for fifteen new hydrants for Colorado Springs The council recognized the importance of putting in these hydrants but the appropriation for such matters being already exhausted the council did not feel justified in allowing the whole requisition However they voted to put in five new hydrants The council acted in this matter with due regard to economy and with a view of making the best of an unfortunate condition of affairs

Chief Pixley however is anxious that the city should be amply provided with protection from fire and the recent conflagration in Denver has confirmed him in his earnest desire that more hydrants should be purchased In company with him last evening we looked over the map of the city and he pointed out two points in the city which were devoid of fire plugs The places are as follows

Pike's Peak avenue near Cascade street
Dale street near Cascade
Willamette avenue near Cascade avenue
Costilla street near Cascade avenue
Rio Grande street between Nevada and Weber
Kiowa street between Nevada and Weber
Cucharras street between Tejon and Nevada
Cascade avenue between Cucharras and Vermijo
St Vrain street and Wahsatch avenue

In the alley near Sessions carpenter shop

All of these places should be protected with hydrants and only five of them have been provided for The burning of one house of any considerable size would destroy more property than the five extra hydrants would cost Of course the council are fully justified in practicing the most rigid economy, and it is not our intention to criticise their action in the least We merely desire to suggest that if they can devise means to secure the hydrants needed, in the light of the recent destruction of property in Denver caused by the lack of hydrants such action would, doubtless meet with general approval

SILVER CLIFF'S CELEBRATION.

Making Arrangements for a Grand Excursion

The people of Silver Cliff are making arrangements for a grand celebration over the completion of the D & R G extension to that city They propose to organize an excursion and have a good time generally The Prospect of yesterday has the following concerning the matter "The committee of arrangements for the railroad demonstration met yesterday morning at the mayor's office After considerable discussion a subcommittee on subscriptions was appointed consisting of Judge Adams, P Hamm, J V B Spencer, H L Austin, J A Dubbs and W S Montgomery The committee then adjourned for the purpose of canvassing Upon meeting again at four o clock it was found that $280 had been subscribed, $200 of which was subscribed by the residents of Cliff street The mayor sent the following telegram last evening

L F G Nims Gen Pass Agent Denver Colo

The citizens of Silver Cliff desire to celebrate the advent of the railroad Yourself and officers of the road are invited to attend as guests of city Will cooperate in grand excursion from Denver Colorado Springs Pueblo Leadville Canon City etc Answer what arrangements can be made

In the French Deputies

PARIS, May 13 — There is strong indignation here against the French proceedings in Tunis Premier Cazot in the chamber of deputies yesterday on being asked by Gancel the legislative question of the Italian consuls in Tunis and the report of his recall, interrupted him in the middle of the question and said We never even thought of recalling Staten Merolo The accusations against Tunis are false I will do the moment I deem the right to be given notice that he would be the attention of the minister of marine to the necessity of giving Italy's fellow sufferers the navy ready at most access to for upholding the dignity of the flag Unfortunately the minister was absent on account of ill health but if present he would doubtless be enabled to give Cavalotto the desired assurance

Rip Van Winkle

Mr Robt McWade, the celebrated actor, will appear in the new Opera House next Thursday evening in "Rip Van Winkle" He will play an engagement of three nights The Leadville Democrat has the following concerning him

Mr McWade is not a mimic and his portrayal of Rip bears hardly an indifferent semblance of any other Rip before the footlights His acting is attended at all times by that spontaneous, unconstrained quality that closes mechanism and attests inspiration, natural vistings and pleasing emotion This declaration is authorized by the demonstration of the audience He does not monopolize the plaudits, but there are other members of his company who show, by virtue of meritorious acting Miss Louise Hallee has just the same interpretation of the role of Edna, that thought and careful study would dictate In her introduction she disciplines her effort so as to conceal her identity which she is called upon to portray a character which is in emphatic contradistinction with that in which she is introduced This creditable versatility has been taken for inability by the authors The company in general is giving unqualified satisfaction, and Rip Van Winkle will be continued the remainder of the week On Saturday afternoon children and parents who have been unable to attend will be afforded an opportunity to see Mr McWade's splendid performance of Rip Van Winkle
